WAS DEPUTY SHERIFF OF SAN MATEO COUNTY AND HAD MANY FRIENDS HERE.

Robert E. Congdon, formerly a deputy sheriff under Sheriff Michael Sheehan, passed away in a hospital at Stockton Monday afternoon following a long illness which was brought about by a nervous breakdown. Although not altogether unexpected, his death comes as a sad blow to the members of his family. He was a son of Mrs. M. S. Congdon and a brother of Clarence E. Congdon of 185 Bellevue avenue, San Mateo, and Mrs. Emma Corcoran of Spokane. He was unmarried.

JOHN R. ORTON WRITES HOME

Well we went through our first battle. Were eight days and nine nights on the front and are just back behind the lines to rest up and believe me everyone is pretty well tired out. I did not get hurt at all, so I guess I am lucky. Going over the top is not as bad as it is said to be. No I have not received any papers of late, but of course second class mail is very slow getting here. Well news is pretty scarce and as I am still mail orderly I have a lot of work to do so am going to write a letter in a few days again as I write two letters a week as a rule.

Well things are pretty quiet lately but most every day we see an aeroplane battle and in the evenings pretty heavy cannonading takes place. It has rained here pretty heavy right along and today it is very cold and cloudy. Well election must be all over by now and be sure and let me know. I expect to get into the Gazette you are sending any day, but of course second class mail is very slow in coming. A person would never believe there were so many cannons, aeroplanes and army equipment in the world as I have seen here in the last month. There is nothing else but soldiers and war material traveling on the roads. I sure do not see where they all come from. I can not see where the Germans can get such with such great odds in men and material. I am feeling very good and very confident everything will soon come out all right.

Well everything we hear is that the war is about over so it sounds good.

PVT. JOHN R. ORTON.

Herbert R. Moran has applied in the superior court for letters of guardianship upon the estate and person of Eugene Merrill, a minor.

LOREN COBURN CROSS DIVIDE WEDNESDAY

Loren Coburn's trials and troubles are over. No longer will he be bothered with annoying law suits, pestered by attorneys with fees or asked to defend himself in an income tax proceeding. He has passed over to the divide where law suits are unheard of and where trouble is unknown. Let it be hoped that he will free the annoying things of this earth. The wealthy old pioneer of Pescadero passed away following a brief illness from pneumonia on Wednesday morning at his home in Redwood City. The remains of the aged capitalist were interred yesterday in Cypress Lawn cemetery.

For the last ten years Coburn's great property and himself had been under constant attack of one kind or another, with actions in court and out that furnished sensations after sensation. At the instance of his nephew, Azro Coburn, the aged land holder was declared incompetent by Judge George H. Buck of San Mateo county in 1908, and Coburn, a nephew by adoption, was appointed his guardian. The old man fought hard, and was restored to competency by the district court of appeals in 1909. He then declared himself incompetent again in 1910 by Maurice T. Dooling, then a superior judge.

Coburn carried his fight for restoration from court to court, reaching even the supreme court of the United States, and finally in 1914 was restored by a jury in a San Francisco court. In the meantime, and avowedly as an attempt to circumvent his relatives, he had married his first wife's sister, and his housekeeper for many years, Sarah Satira Upton. He was then 84 and she was 58.

In 1915 she began an action to have him declared incompetent, but later dismissed the suit. In the same year Coburn "sold" his ranch to "Paul E. Guggenheim" for $10,000,000, receiving therefor checks signed with a typewriter, and at the same time agreements dropped up in which he contracted to sell his estate for $100,000. But this assault was finally routed by Coburn's lawyers and since that time the aged pair have lived in peace but for a law suit now and then.

Though a resident of Pescadero, the active years of Mr. Coburn's life have been passed in the mining regions of California and the growing cities of Oakland and San Francisco. Loren Coburn was born in Brookfield, Orange county, Vermont, January 11, 1827, with New England blood and the promise of future success. When ten years of age he remained in the years of age his home was changed to Massachusetts, where he remained until he started for California in 1851. He shipped to New York on the steamer Falcon bound for Cuba, and after crossing the Isthmus of Panama he took passage on the ship Panama, arriving in San Francisco June 1, 1851. From there he went at once to the northern mines, by way of Sacramento and Greenwood valley, and remained four months at the placers on the middle fork of the American river. On returning to San Francisco, laden with the fruits of his successful mining experience, he was induced to enter a business life, though it had been his intention to take a trip to the east before making any permanent arrangements in the new home. He engaged in the lively business in Oakland, where he remained for four years, after which he disposed of his stable, purchasing another in San Francisco, and continuing in active business for eleven years. While still engaged in the city Mr. Coburn purchased the Butana rancho containing forty-four hundred and forty-four acres, afterwards adding the Puntito del Any rancho, the latter containing about fifteen thousand acres, which he owned in partnership with J. Clark, later purchasing Mr. Clark's interest. After the sale of his interest in San Francisco he leased his ranch to the Steele Brothers and in 1866 took his long-deferred trip back to the land of his birth. Returning in 1868, he spent the next four years in San Francisco and at the expiration of the lease of the Steele Brothers, in 1872, he removed to Pigeon Point and assumed charge of his vast property, having added to it ten thousand acres on the Salinas river, and a large tract of timber land near Pescadero. The famous Pebble Beach is located on this property and here Mr. Coburn has erected a mammoth hotel.

United States light house at Pigeon Point and New Years Island are also located on property once owned by Mr. Coburn. For many years he engaged in the dairy and stock business making the same success that had characterized his earlier efforts.

Mr. Coburn has made Pescadero his home for many years, and has won the esteem of his fellow-citizens by his worthy efforts to make himself an honor to the land of his adoption. He has a lively stable in Pescadero, this being his chief occupation, as he had rented his ranches, and had the distinction of being one of the largest landowners in the county, owning in the vicinity of fifty square miles. Mr. Coburn married Miss Mary Antoinette Upton, a native of Reading, Mass. She died in Pescadero in 1897 leaving one son, William W. Coburn.

The Congregational church has been thoroughly fumigated. Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on "Go Forward." Going forward is not always progress.

The little girl was four years old. The complaint alleges carelessness on the part of the company. Plaintiff also asks for the sum of $187 for expenses incurred in connection with the funeral of the child.

S. CROZIER PASSED AWAY THIS WEEK

On the 13th day of November at the hour of 11 a. m. Samuel Crozier, veteran real estate operator of San Francisco peacefully and sublimely passed into the realm of the "Great Beyond."

He was born in Boston, Mass., and embarked at that port on his trip around the Horn. He arrived at San Francisco in the year 1870 and immediately became identified with realty interests of the Pacific metropolis.

He became connected with the firm of Baldwin & Howell during the year of 1890 and remained a fixture in that concern up to the time of his demise.

Mr. Crozier was a man of rare judgment in the matters of real estate values, and his propensities along those lines can be best attested to by the bench and bar of San Francisco.

The interment took place yesterday at Woodlawn cemetery, Colma.

REDWOOD SURE CELEBRATED THE NEWS OF PEACE

When the news reached Redwood City a little after midnight on last Sunday that Germany had accepted the Allies' terms of armistice thus ending the world's war, the people went wild with enthusiasm. The whistles blew, bells rang and in a little while pandemonium reigned. The pent up emotions of the citizens were given full vent. A procession was formed on Main street and headed by M. F. Ryan, marched up the principal streets. Men, women and children joined in the parade. For over an hour the demonstration kept up. Peace had come and the people were happy. Mothers who had sons in the war were the happiest for soon "Johnnie" would come marching home. Monday all the stores were closed and Redwood City enjoyed a holiday. The Governor declared it so. There was no big celebration but there was plenty of noise all day. Many attended the mammoth celebration in the city. November 11, 1918 will long be remembered by the people of Redwood City. Blessed peace had come and now reigns over the land.

THE WAR WORK DRIVE IS STARTED

The captains of the War Work drive held a meeting yesterday afternoon at the First National Bank and conferred with the chairman of the drive, L. P. Beltrami. Notes were compared and a renewed effort decided upon. There are $12,000 to be collected in this district and not more than half that sum has been accounted for. The drive will be completed next week. The captains have been somewhat hampered by the stirring events of the first part of the week. Yesterday money was pouring in rapidly. LEON ROBERT KILLED IN SERVICE OF HIS COUNTRY

News of the death of Leon Robert, young son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Robert of Mountain View but formerly residing in the Alpine district near La Honda, reached here yesterday. He was at the front and was killed in battle. With his two brothers he trained at Camp Lewis and all three were members of the famous Ninety-First Division. All went to France with this army and have been in the thickest of the fighting at the front on the banks of the Marne. One of the boys in writing from the front to his mother told a pathetic story. He said that while he was charging the enemy in front he stumbled over the dead body of his brother. He picked up the lifeless remains of his relative and took them to a place of safety and resumed his work and gritting his teeth he dashed forward with his comrades making the Hun pay dearly that day for the death of his brother. TWO VALUABLE PAPERS WERE FILED THIS WEEK

THE COBURN RANCH OF 10,000
 ACRES WERE CONTRACTED FOR THIS WEEK

Two instruments of vast import were filed in the county recorder's office late Tuesday evening. One was the deed given by Loren Coburn to C. H. Wideman for the purchase of the Coburn ranch of 10,000 acres of land at Pescadero for $875,000. It was given in connection with a lease of the vast tract. The lease and option are to expire September 23, 1924. Mr. Wideman may at any time buy the ranch. He is paying the sum of $15,000 a year for the land. Mr. Coburn did not sign the instrument. The other document is an extension of the lease and option for five years, that is from September 28, 1924 to September 28, 1929. The last instrument is signed by both Mr. and Mrs. Coburn. The first instrument was executed on March 29, 1914 and the extension on April 10, 1918. The fact that Mr. Coburn passed away the day following the recording the documents places much importance on them from a legal standpoint.

CALIFORNIA AND CALIFORNIANS

BY GENERAL JOHN F. SHEEHAN

CAUTAIN PORTOLA, A BACHELOR

In 1767, Chas. III, King of Spain, having issued a manifesto for the deportation of the Jesuit Missionaries from Baja, California, Captain Gaspar de Portola, of a Spanish regiment of dragoons, was selected by Jose de Galvez, Viscaino General and Marquis Croix, Viceroy of New Spain (or Mexico), to carry out the royal decree, with the official title of Commandante Jefe, which was equivalent to the Governorship of California. How he performed the special duty allotted to him has been told heretofore. But among the Franciscan Fathers to whose charge of such forceful characters that Portola was only in a comparatively secondary position beside him; and thereafter until his death in 1784, Father Junipero Serra was the dominating spirit in the life of all California. The irrepressible Francis can remember the reports of Viscaino concerning the bays of San Diego and Monterey, and he determined to find those ports and settle the country to which and convert the natives to Christianity. It did not take him long to convert Galvez and Portola to his theories, and accordingly in 1769 an expedition was organized at La Paz to enter upon the exploration of what is now known as California. General Galvez himself superintending the outfitting.

San Diego was the immediate objective point, and it was deemed best to send an expedition to sea to co-join the vessels San Jose, San Carlos and San Antonio were dispatched from La Paz in the spring of 1769, the land forces starting later in two divisions, the first under command of Fernando Rivera Y Moncada, the second under Portola, Father Serra, bringing up the rear. On July 1, 1769, the expeditions concentrated at San Diego with about 130 persons and this date may justly be considered the natal day of our California.

But Monterey was on the mental map of the indefatigable President of the Missions, and on July 14th Portola started on the overland expedition, being accompanied by Fathers Crespi and Gomez, Rivera Moncada, Lieutenant Pages, Engineer Constanse, Sergeant Jose Francisco de Ortega, and soldiers, muleteers, pack animals and supplies, leaving Serra and the others at San Diego. The Portola party hugged the coast when possible, following the route of the present El Camino Real. (The King's Highway) until the mouth of Salinas river was reached. Los Angeles river was named "Porcinucula," and the Indian village on its banks called by the natives "Yangua." As the expedition proceeded northward, the Indians received them with great kindness. Arriving at the mouth of the Salinas river, they regarded Monterey bay as the ocean and sailed about 20 miles north of the cove of Monterey where Viscaino landed they proceeded northward to the Pajaro river, following the ocean over the sites of the present towns of Watsonville, Santa Cruz, Pajaro, and Halfway Bay, until on the last day of October they reached the vicinity of Point San Pedro. Here a halt was ordered and Sergeant Ortega was sent forward with a small detachment to reconnoiter.

Next day the Sergeant encountered the sand hills of San Francisco from whence his eyes rested upon Point Reyes to the north, saw our Golden Gate, and to the east a great inland sea, returning at once and reporting to his commander. Bearings were taken by Constanse, the engineer, and remembering the latitude reported by Viscaino, it was evident that they had passed Monterey. The party marched over the hills to the south-east and rested in the foothills near the present towns of San Mateo or Redwood City, from whence they could see the great bay stretched southward towards what is now the city of San Jose. But Monterey was the objective point of their mission and without further exploration or even giving the bay a name they retraced their steps to the ocean and began the return march southward on the 11th day of November, not having laid stress upon the fact that they had discovered one of the greatest ports in the world, upon the shores of which was destined to rise a magnificent city, the metropolis of the Pacific. On the return trip they met with no greater success than before in locating the cove of Monterey, and they reached San Diego on January 24, 1770, the return trip occupying 73 days.

Portola was evidently discouraged, and but for the persistence of Father Serra, California would have been lost to civilization perhaps a generation or more. The Indians in the vicinity of San Diego were quarrelsome and thievish. They were not lacking food, but so strenuously demanded cloth that they even fought for it. A vessel had been sent to Mexico for supplies and on its failure to appear Portola proposed returning overland through the desert wastes of Baja, California to Loreto and thence to Mexico. But Serra begged and prayed to the point of a vehement degree. Then Portola fixed on a date when they should start, but Providence came to the aid of Father Serra, for before the time set the vessel San Antonio appeared and the Missions were saved. It was "on to Monterey" once more, for the President of the Missions was unfaltering in his determination not to abandon the proposed settlement of the beautiful country which laid before them.

On April 17th a second land expedition led by Portola left San Diego in search of Monterey, while Father Serra, whose lacerated leg bothered him severely, sailed on the San Antonio for the same destination. This time Portola was successful in his search for the real Monterey of Viscaino, and on June 3, 1770, the sea and land parties assembled, the Mission of San Carlos Borromeo was formally established and the entire country was proclaimed to be the possession of the King of Spain.

This ended the career of Captain Gaspar de Portola in California, for on the 9th of July he sailed from Monterey for San Blas and thence to Mexico City, never to return. Students of California history have been at a loss to know why published works have cast no further light upon Portola than as given above. The modern encyclopedias do not contain his name. Californians only knew that he came to our land in 1769 and returned within about a year thereafter. It was left to Donald E. Smith, professor of history and geography in the University of California, to fill the missing link. Dr. Smith discovered new material concerning Portola in the Bancroft Collection of the State University, and in order to complete the information the Professor made a journey to Mexico City and Puebla and examined the archives in those cities. It appears that on arriving at San Blas, Portola proceeded to Mexico City where he made report to Viceroy Croix, and an appetite for the recognition of his exploits in California, with a request for reward and promotion. In time he was commissioned to be Lieutenant Colonel in the army of Spain and made Governor of the Province of Puebla, and before his death was raised to the rank of Colonel.

We hear of him as Governor of Puebla, (now an important city in Mexico, population about 100,000) as late as 1782, when Matias Galvez, brother of the Viscaino General Galvez noted in earlier pages, became Viceroy of Mexico. In 1784 he returned to Spain and probably to his native town. Portola was born in Balanquer, Catalonia, Spain, in 1722, and at the age of 12 was appointed alferaz, or ensign, in a Spanish regiment of dragoons. In Spain and Portugal he no doubt had considerable military service, and the latter country his regiment was engaged against the English forces commanded by the same General Burgoyne who in 1777 surrendered to the Colonial General Gates at Saratoga in America. Portola's regiment probably came to America in 1764 or '65. It is stated that Portola was unmarried when he sailed from Monterey at the age of 48.

To the Editor: I have emphasized the fact that Portola left California a bachelor in middle age, and never returned, for the reason that certain California published papers have claimed descent from him, notably the "San Francisco Chronicle." Several years ago when Senior Couarrubias was grand marshal of the Columbian procession some San Francisco papers published the claim that he was a white woman in the Portola expedition. Jose Maria Couarrubias (presumably the father of the marshal) was appointed a commissioner by Governor Pio Pico to look after the affairs of Baja California.

SAN CARLOS ITEMS

While millions throughout the world were rejoicing at the glad tidings last Tuesday morning which brought peace and healing on its wings there was a saddened home in our midst. For the one bearing the dearest name to all men, and the name most closely associated with the word home—Mother, was taken from the O'Brien home and tenderly and reverently laid to rest in Holy Cross cemetery by the bereaved relatives. The O'Briens moved here from San Francisco a few months ago for the benefit of Mrs. O'Brien's health hoping the change from the fog belt of San Francisco to the warmer and sunnier climate would help her and perhaps restore her to her normal health. Mrs. O'Brien was suffering from anemia and while she patiently fought against the inroads of this grim disease, her body succumbed after months of suffering. And while the O'Briens had lived among us but a few months, through the long patient suffering of the wife and mother and the devoted vigil and tender care of the father, daughters and son they had endeared themselves to every one in the community and the sympathy of all go out to them in this saddest hour of their lives. Mrs. O'Brien's untimely passing is closely associated with the war and the coming of peace, for she too had a boy at the front helping to fight the world's battles and she, like other mothers, had looked forward and hoped to live to see her soldier boy come marching home and be privileged to enjoy the ecstacy of such a meeting. And now the manly and brave soldier boy will come to a saddened home.

There is no tie that binds the family circle like the golden link of a mother's love. But which we fail to understand until she has gone to join the sacred throng above. We shall not try to fathom the ways of the Infinite: For His ways are not our ways, and as 'tis said in holy writ, God gave and God takes away. And we with our bleeding hearts can only say, Dear Lord, to thy will we humbly bow. And ask for grace to bear our sorrow.

Mrs. Louis La Place, who's husband, Lieutenant La Place, is at the front near "No Man's Land," was here for the week-end at the home of her friend, Mrs. Mary E. Quinn.

Mrs. Jennie McLean Willets, one of San Francisco's teachers, was here over Sunday as the guest of her aunt Mrs. Virginia A. Lord.

Because he had been so successful in his management of all other drives, Red Cross, Liberty Bonds and War Savings, Asa E. Hull has been chosen to captain the United War Work campaign. Mr. Hull has selected as his chief aids, our most active and enthusiastic ladies in work of this kind: The Misses May Quinn, Mary L. Farnham and Mrs. Gladys E. Peterson.

San Carlos is admittedly the most quiet and peaceful place on earth when the residents are left to their own caprices and devices. Always calm and serene. Not even the laration of war nor that of peace serve to disturb the serenity nor that calm equanimity which seems to be theirs. They seem to have been taught in the schools of the stoics of old. And it is only when a violent autoist, or a wild deputy constable runs amuck in our vicinity on the state highway that we are treated to a little excitement. Such was the case last Tuesday evening when one of the big trucks of the Overland Freight and Transfer company was tied up here with $1200 worth of meat for delivery to various meat markets at Redwood City, Woodside, Menlo Park, Palo Alto and Mayfield.

The truck, No. 23, was driven by Geo. Christensen and he was accompanied by his friend Bill Raftery. When approaching San Carlos a solid tire on a wheel of the big truck broke and Christensen was forced to phone his company to send out a machinist with a new wheel to make repairs.

This required considerable time. While Christensen and his friend Raftery were killing time in front of Kern's oil station and emporium, along comes Deputy Constable Baradat of the Peninsula Beer Delivery, South San Francisco in his little roadster and stops to replenish his gasoline supply. As it was after six o'clock and contrary to the low to clock and contrary to the law, the proprietor of the supply station declined to serve the officer of the law, and as Mr. Baradat's apparent discomfort and disappointment served to amuse the Overland boys, they made some amusing remarks, which angered the guardian of the law and he flashed his star and took the young men into custody proceeding to San Mateo where he delivered them at the police station and insisted that they be looked up. After the officer heard the young men's story, he informed Mr. Baradat that as he could place no charge of disturbing the peace against them he would be forced to turn them loose and allow them to return to their car at San Carlos. All this time the truck of valuable cargo was left on the state highway after nightfall without guard or protection of any kind, a driver barely missed a machine going in the opposite direction, and it afterwards transpired that it was the machine from the Overland people's shop carrying the machinist who were to make the repairs on the truck which Christensen had been forced to desert when taken in by the officer of the law. The machinist in the runabout who escaped being hit by a very close margin, were J. Allen, E. Constanse and J. Garabaldi, all of San Francisco and men in the employ of the Transfer company.

To the Editor: I have emphasized the fact that Portola left California a bachelor in middle age, and never returned, for the reason that certain California published papers have claimed descent from him, notably the "San Francisco Chronicle." Several years ago when Senior Couarrubias was grand marshal of the Columbian procession some San Francisco papers published the claim that he was a white woman in the Portola expedition. Jose Maria Couarrubias (presumably the father of the marshal) was appointed a commissioner by Governor Pio Pico to look after the affairs of Baja California.

Menlo Boy Died in France

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Grubb of Palo Alto received a letter from the war department at Washington yesterday announcing the death of their son, Richard Grubb, at the front on July 20. This was the first intimation received by the broken hearted parents of the death of their boy. He was no doubt in the big battle of the marines at Chateau Thierry in July when the Germans were driven back. It was in this engagement that Stanton Mullen of Redwood City was wounded. It may be said that terrible fighting of the marines at this engagement precipitated the retreat of the Germans. The Huns began running after this battle and never stopped until compelled to surrender. Mr. and Mrs. Grubb have only received a meager account of the death of their son. Richard Grubb enlisted in the navy soon after the declaration of the war and for a time was stationed at Mare Island. He went to France early this year.

Before entering the department he was engaged in the drug business at Palo Alto. He was a modest, unassuming man, well liked for his manly bearing and patriotic spirit. He was born in San Francisco 21 years ago. The death of the young man brings the horror of war right home to the people of Menlo Park. The boy's mother before her marriage was known as Miss Lizzie Kuck, a cousin of Miss Bertha Kuck and Mrs. John B. Welsh. Richard Kuck, her father was the first postmaster of Menlo Park, erected the first grocery and in the early seventies built the old Menlo Park hotel. She was born here and grew to womanhood and spent life's golden hours in this favored place. Mrs. Grubb has been ill for a number of years and the death of the boy she loved so well will be a severe shock to her. The young man spent many years of his life here. It is difficult to think this bright, jovial and boyish boy has passed away his youth. It is, however, a consolation to know that he died in a great cause, died for humanity and for freedom. He made, as has many other young Americans, have made the supreme sacrifice and has enrolled his name on the scroll of fame to endure as long as the world exists.

American Republic lasts. Richard Grubb may be forgotten but deeds and those of his comrades at the historic battle of Chateau Thierry in far off France will live for ever, sacred ground and revered the memory of the brave young men who gave up their precious lives for freedom's sake.

All the Menlo Park schools will open next Monday.

Chester Canfield leaves today for an army camp in North Carolina. He goes with tank contingent. Mr. and Mrs. William Canfield have two other boys in the service, one at the front and the other in a northern army camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles N. Felton have returned to town and are taking apartments at California and Jones streets. They passed the summer at their home in Menlo Park. Later in the year they intend going to San Diego for a visit.

Friends of Mr. Atherton Macondray are glad to hear that he is recovering from a severe attack of influenza. Mr. and Mrs. Macondray and their daughter, Miss Mary Elena Macondray, are lingering at their summer home in Palo Alto, where they have been passing the warm season.

A blaze started at the Della Fleishacker home at Atherton on Wednesday but it was promptly put out by the fire department that was on hand shortly after the alarm was sounded. The fire started from a defective stove. Very little damage was done.

Some movement should be started at once to drain the sides of the highway in town of the storm waters. It is disgraceful to see large pools of water on our main thoroughfare. The state highway commission ought to be communicated with at once and if it does not take the matter in hand the people should assert their authority and have the work done. The stagnant pools are a menace to the health of the community. The local authorities are not to blame for they have no jurisdiction. The remedy lies with the state commission.

Father Molisan, the chaplain of the Sixty-second regiment, which was stationed at Camp Fremont for many months, during which time he endeared himself to a large number of Peninsula people and interested them in his boys, as he called them, has sent word that when they were three days out to sea headed for France a wireless recalled them to America, as fifty men on board had the influenza. The men did not know where they were, and were much surprised to find that they had returned instead of arriving in France. Father Molisan's one hope was to serve at the front, and now that peace is here he will never realize his dream.

The abandonment of the central officers' training camp at Camp Fremont, which was scheduled to open with 20,000 students on October 1st, was ordered from Washington yesterday, and the heads of all military establishments were instructed to accept no further applications for admissions to officers' camps.

While no student has come on now will be done with the men now in officers' camps, the impression prevails that they will be allowed to complete their courses before being returned to civil life.

Western department authorities are convinced that Camp Fremont will remain as an important adjunct of the military machine for two years yet, while it is being used as a demobilization center for the Pacific coast. Such an establishment will be necessary, they say.

As to the future of the student officers' training units in universities a dispatch from Washington last night said that Secretary of War Baker was considering the advisability of stopping this work with the least disruption to the institutions involved. A policy will be worked out, the secretary said, that will turn the colleges back to their regular pursuits as quickly as possible without causing losses to the institutions.

John P. O'Farrell while engaged in cranking one of his father's taxies had the bone of his right arm fractured, the machine "kicking back."

The injured limb was set by Dr. Van Gorden, an eminent surgeon of the base hospital. The young man will be confined to his home for some weeks.

The Fremont Theatre will open this evening with a splendid program. A first-class picture will be presented. A young ladies' orchestra will furnish the music. The big treatise is well ventilated. The picture will be the very best ever witnessed in Menlo Park. The program will change daily. The first show beginning promptly at 6 o'clock. Come early and get a seat for the theatre will be packed. It has been closed owing to the epidemic for over a month.

The ending of the war was duly celebrated by the people of Menlo Park on Monday evening. A procession was formed at the Moose club and headed by a band from Camp Fremont paraded up Santa Cruz avenue, where it turned and marched and then marched through all the principal streets. All along the line of march the fire rockets were sent off, the people yelling themselves hoarse with joy. It was a great demonstration, the like of which has not been seen in Menlo Park before. The parade disbanded at the Moose Club. A bonfire was then started on the square near the depot. The Moose Club kept open house and royally entertained all. It was an event that will live long in memory. The fire works were kindly donated by Nelson and Vail, of the Little Green Door. A number of the soldiers at Camp Fremont participated.

SPECIAL LETTERS OF AD- MINISTRATION ASKED

Late yesterday afternoon W. A. Brooke, through his attorneys, Ross and Ross, applied for special letters of administration upon the estate of Loren Coburn, who died on Wednesday. The petition states that the estate needs immediate attention.

Azro A. Coburn has also filed a petition asking to be appointed guardian of Wallace Loren Coburn, aged 63 years, the immediate son of the late Loren Coburn. The petitioner is a cousin of the incompetent. Azro A. Coburn has also petitioned the superior court to have Sarah Satira Coburn, widow of the aged capitalist, declared incompetent. The petition states that owing to her old age and infirmities she is incompetent to handle the affairs of the Coburn estate. No doubt other petitions will be filed shortly. It is not known that Coburn left a will.

YOU know and WE know that prices on all materials used in the process of Dyeing and Cleaning are way up! IT MEANS SUBSTITUTION, a "bad odor" and perhaps ruin of garments sooner or later.

Electrical Appliances for Christmas Gifts

The government urges that Christmas giving this year be confined to useful gifts.

What is more useful than an electrical appliance? They serve a two-fold purpose—saving for your government and saving for your household.

Electrical appliances are attractively manufactured and are a distinct addition to the interior ornamentation of any home. Ask your electrical contractor dealer for complete information regarding Government approved electrical appliances.
